MAGA's territorial ambition and global layout

"Let America be great again" (MAGA) is the slogan of Trump's New Deal, with all kinds of strong praise and desperate opposition. I hope that people with rational thinking should treat them with a normal heart. Instead of praise or abuse without in the heart, it is better to explore and think seriously. As an observer of current affairs in the United States, I am open to any comments, so I also carefully analyze and verify the true intentions of MAGA. There may be mistakes and poor consideration, but it can always play a role in giving back to netizens' visits or valuable discussions.

During Trump's first election and after he came to government, although his governance program was generally good, it was not perfect and practical. Both the environment and the people's hearts are not prepared enough, coupled with the impact of the epidemic, his governance has not achieved the expected results. I have always been cautious and wait-and-see. Eight years ago, I wrote many times that I was not optimistic about the practical meaning of Trump's blueprint. But he has a positive attitude towards his candidal: "The appearance and venture of Trump is not accidental, but a historical choice. Some of the issues he raised have the effect of actively countering and restraining the politics of the two parties. It is not a bad thing to have Trump, a wild horse, attack and restrain current affairs, and attract the participation and debate of the whole people. Trump's advocacy of solving the problems arising from globalization, increasing domestic employment opportunities, reducing illegal immigration, etc., all have positive implications.

There is no perfect man or righteous person in the world. After four years of practical politics and the following four years of thinking in the field, there is no doubt that Trump has matured a lot, and he is not yet 80 years old. It was a few years earlier than Moses, who fought, came out again at the age of 80 after 40 years of training. Please don't misunderstand me. I will decide who is the "chosen one". No one now has such power to judge who is perfect enough to lead the United States. This is just a metaphor. Many people in the United States, like me, have gradually understood the latest governance program of Trump with the maturity of Trump and the evolution of the times.

Trump's re-government has raised many issues that have not been mentioned before. This article is only an analysis and reasoning. It does not conclude whether the right or wrong can achieve or when to achieve the purpose of a big game of chess. Leave it to history to make a conclusion. The most striking new focus is what many people think of as "territorial ambition", which includes all kinds of real and false speculations. The targets are Canada, Mexico, Greenland, Panama, the Middle East and Israel, Ukraine, and even Taiwan. However, this article focuses on the Greenland, Canada and Panama Canals mentioned by Kawaguchi, as well as the global layout of other places.

What I care about most is Canada. Since modern times, the United States and Canada have been regarded as a model of friendly relations between countries. As a former Canadian resident, understanding the feelings of both sides is indeed more close than the sibling relationship. In the bottom of their hearts, many people in the United States regard Canada as another state's family, but it is inconvenient to say it. Therefore, the procedures for changing a Canadian driver's license to a California driver's license are similar to those in other states, and it is not regarded as a foreigner (I don't know if there is any change now). Canada's homeland defense has long been handed over to the Americans, and the U.S. customs is actually set up in Canada to facilitate travelers to enter the United States. When it was said that Canada was going to become the 51st state of the United States, it did hurt some people's feelings, and protests and resistance were endless. Some people fought back, buying or annexing the richest state of California in the United States. But another group of Canadians are quietly dreaming the American dream or stealing fun.

Under the freedom of speech, as long as you don't break the law, you can say whatever you want. You can also scold the big mouth of public figures. In a democratic republican country, the final decision-making power is still public opinion and Congress. But the president's remarks. It is also an indisputable fact that it can change public opinion. When it comes to Greenland, one wants to buy it, but Denmark says it won't sell, but both sides leave a gap: public opinion. The reason is the national security of rare earths and the United States and Canada. The island is sparsely populated and already has a U.S. military base. According to legend, most of the islanders agree with the friendliness of the United States. Greenland and California can both have a referendum to buy or sell the United States. Which do you think is more likely?

If you open the spherical map, you will suddenly find that if Greenland is merged into the United States, Canada will become the "thing in the bag" of the United States, leaving only the mouth of the Arctic Ocean. From another perspective, if Greenland's defenses are strengthened, Canada will be safer and less worried, with fewer threats from the east. The same landscape is also evident in the south. With the emergence of the Gulf of America, if the Panama Canal returns, Lao Mo can only go to the Pacific Ocean, but it is protected by the United States. The above is only a geographical description. In fact, it is not easy to join the United States. The American people do not necessarily want you. Public opinion and Congress are not easy to bypass. Historically, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Philippines are all good examples. Hawaii became the final winner.

Americans adhere to the British's strategic thinking. After hundreds of years, the Chinese learned to be a little fur and acted well. The strategic layout of 23 countries and a total of 43 ports in the hands of Hong Kong tycoon Li Ka-shing has been quietly carried out for more than 10-20 years, in conjunction with the Belt and Road Initiative and the internal and foreign propaganda. The reprimand or abuse of Li's "escape" on WeChat in the past were all routines and acting, in order to cover up a mysterious game of chess. The Panama Canal is one of the key points. This is a great project created by Americans with a lot of money and lives. Even the independence of the country is also due to the gift of the United States. After getting the canal with one yuan, he turned around and became a white-eyed wolf.

When Trump said that the Panama Canal had been controlled by the Chinese army, many people, including myself, felt inconsistent or far-fetched. The first stop of the new Secretary of State Rubio's inaur office is Panama. With the release of more information, the truth came out. The Communist Party of China can indeed force Li Ka-shing to close relevant ports at any time, especially in wartime, it can immediately block the entry and exit of the U.S. military. Isn't this the same as being controlled by the army? In fact, the testicles of many Hong Kong businessmen, Taiwanese businessmen and foreign businessmen who have invested in the mainland have been pinched by the Communist Party of China. Li Ka-shing has invested in 43 ports. Without the cooperation of the Chinese Communist Party of China, it is unlikely that it will be completely done. Do you think Li really escaped? The United States should have already grasped the relevant information. There is never more than one Hong Kong businessman like Li Ka-shing, and there are a lot of them. For example, Chen Qizong, an American businessman, is also a real estate businessman. He sings about a better tomorrow every day and works hard to do alternative problems for the publicity at home and abroad. Don't believe it? Please go to YouTube to have a look. Li Ka-shing has begun to shift the blame. What about other treacherous businessmen?

The strategy of the United States is first at home, and secondly, it also includes the world's major strategic places, including Taiwan and the Strait of Malaka, where China communicates with the outside world. Singapore, which holds the latter, has become an important transit station for the sale of U.S. chips. "As early as 1990, the United States signed the Protocol for Amendment to the Memorandum of Understanding with Singapore to establish a defense cooperation between the two sides. By 2019, the two sides further extended the agreement. According to the new agreement, the U.S. military can use Singapore's military bases and receive logistical support if necessary. According to some of Trump's recent developments, he will definitely try to use various means to gain control of the Strait of Malaka, but he does not want to pay for the multi-national allied army alone. During this period, the United States robbed the Panama Canal and scared away He Ji, which is probably killing Singapore and Malaysia.

The layout of the United States on the coast of China and the Second Island Chain is also progressing step by step. Many Pacific islands close to the mainland have been reactivated or rebuilt, and Taiwan is certainly the most important outpost. Like Europeans, Taiwan often calculates if the United States will send troops or how much when a crisis occurs. The first consideration of Trump's global strategy is how much sacrifice the protected person is willing to make? Just like during World War II, the United States saw that its friends were really beaten, so it quoted the "Lease Act" to strongly support the British Empire. He is even more stingy about the bullied Soviet Union, reluctant to go to sea, waiting for the best fighter.

The first strategy of the United States is to contain and make full preparations to prevent the outbreak of war. Trump's new defense minister, Hegses, has publicly clarified the above position many times. Many outsiders think that the United States will send troops to do this and that for the sake of its own morality, which is a whimsical thing. The United States requires EU countries to spend 5% of the total military expenditure, while most countries are currently only about 1%. Ukraine is at war for 37%, while Taiwan is currently only 3%. Trump will force all relevant countries to contribute their work and money. Americans believe that free lunch will only raise more white-eyed wolves.

Back to the territorial issue. Those who are going to war between the United States and Canada should be completely disappointed. The territorial requirements of the United States and all countries and regions will be complied with or forced to comply with the will of their nationals, which is essentially different from that of authoritarian countries. Some people criticized Trump's territorial claim as an immoral act, saying that it would stimulate the aggressive appetite of China, Russia and other countries, which may be true. But can you imagine that more than half of the population in Taiwan will support the "reunification" of the Communist Party of China? Greenland may one day exceed half, while Canada and Mexico are unknowns, all depending on the change in public opinion. Take Canada as an example, the living standards of the two countries have not been much different over the past 200 years. However, in the past ten years, the gap has slowly widened, and more and more people have gone south to dig for gold. If the trend continues, it is not impossible for a country dominated by immigrants to change mainstream public opinion.

Some netizens believe that Canada and Mexico are a huge natural and human resources countries, and the latter also has a booming medium and low-end manufacturing industry, which can fully make up for the shortcomings of the United States. Obviously, Trump and the Americans do not think of merging Mexico at present, because she will change the demographic structure of the United States and have doubts about complete Latinization. Of course, this is just a personal guess.

The United States liberated and rebuilt Europe. Given that she is now very powerful, the United States really doesn't need to spend more money on this land and fight with Russia. Old Russia has only half a life left. With her, Europe will have the strength to check and balance. The same is true for China's mentality, which can't be said too obviously. Playing with strategic balance, Britain and the United States are both masters. UNLIKE SOME PEOPLE, THEY ARE ALL ONE-SIDED OR DUALISTIC THINKING, AND THEY HAVE TO DREME PEOPLE TO A DEAD CORNER. The United States does not want to play nuclear war, but dictatorial countries want to try it. Because they have the resources, they can build countless bunkers to hide at will and let the people be cannon fodder. In the 1960s and 1970s, the Soviet Union had planned to use nuclear weapons to deal with the disobedient Mao and the Communist Party of China, which led to a big hole in the whole country. Finally, the United States stopped the uncapped big brother. Have you ever been grateful to the United States? Therefore, Russia and Ukraine need a ceasefire. The key is to avoid nuclear war. Other rhetoric, most of them are tricks to fool you or make you a white-eyed wolf. Have you been fooled?

Conclusion: The global strategy of the United States is not contraction, but strategic adjustment: the sword points to the east, surround but not fight, and wait for the encirclement and annihilation aircraft. The United States will also take advantage of the Communist Party of China's "politics is always correct", such as topics such as "unification" and the South China Sea, constantly breaking through the self-delineation of the Communist Party of China, forcing the Communist Party of China to be either humiliated or reckless. At the same time, strengthen the military power of small NATO in Asia, especially Japan. In short, the United States gives priority, which is a very practical and rational national traditional policy.

Will Trump's administration succeed in the end?

I'm not interested in it. Finally, let's talk about the "moralism" that many people are talking about. In the Constitution of Israel, there is no territorial boundary. The major religions in the world are familiar with the teachings of the Bible, but unfortunately too many Chinese only know the "law of the jungle" left by their ancestors. If you accidentally guessed it right, it's just a riddle. But Trump's success has been forever recorded in history: he risked his life to let us know the deception and destruction of the left, socialism and all the high-eight political and correct hypocritical slogans. Let your life values and I have a real turning point.
